THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Cleveland, Ohio

Vol. 4, No. 5

An Act of Repentance . . .

‘to climb a higher mountain than we’ve ever climbed before.’

—Bishop James S. Thomas

United Methodists Repent for Racism

CLEVELAND (UMNS) — In a May 4 service that included the symbolic wearing of sackcloth and ashes, United Methodists confessed the sin of racism within the denomination.

The act of repentance, together with a call for reconciliation, was an attempt to recapture the spirit of Methodism lost when some African Americans in the 18th and 19th centuries felt compelled to leave the church's predecessor bodies and formed their own congregations.

It's high time to say
we're sorry,
and only
the General Conference can do it.

Representatives of the three historically Black Methodist denominations were present when a silver triangular plumbline, as symbolized in the book of Amos, was lowered before General Conference delegates and other participants "as a constant reminder that we must pass God's test for righteousness."

Bishop William Boyd Grove compared lingering racism to "a malignancy in the bone marrow of the church" and called for an official apology.

"It's high time to say we're sorry, and only the General Conference can do it," he said. "Only the General Conference speaks for the church."

In words and dramatic imagery, the Rev. Anthony Alexander, a Central Pennsylvania delegate, and the Rev. William B. McClain, a professor at Wesley Theological Seminary, told the stories of the discriminatory acts that led to the formation of the African Methodist Episcopal, African Methodist Episcopal Zion and Christian Methodist Episcopal churches.

But racism remained for African Americans who stayed. When the Methodist Episcopal Church North, Methodist Episcopal Church South and Methodist Protestant Church united in 1939, a separate jurisdiction — the Central Jurisdiction — was created for Black members. Retired Bishop James S. Thomas, who remembered the sorrow of that period, noted that God has now given the church the opportunity "to climb a higher mountain than we've ever climbed before."

To drive home a point about racism today, Bishop Woodie White "performed a miracle" and pronounced that all White people in the audience had become persons of color. He predicted that some of them might lose pastoral appointments or church leadership positions as a result of the change in their skin tone.

Responding to the call for confession, participants received a strip of sackcloth to pin onto their clothes and a rubbing of ashes on the wrist as signs of penance.

Bishop McKinley Young of the African Methodist Episcopal Church responded that he couldn't speak for his grandparents but added, "I wish they could hear your confession tonight. I believe that there is a balcony in heaven, and that there are clouds of witnesses who bend their ears to hear."

Bishop Clarence Carr, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, said he hoped United Methodists would move from the symbolism of the service to substance. Redemption demands restitution and reparation, he noted, and "a new sense of freedom both for the victim and the victimizer."

"It is my hope that we will be deeply committed to making this symbolic act a reality," added Bishop Nathaniel Lindsey, of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

The service was sponsored jointly by the United Methodist General Commission on Christian Unity and Interreligious Concerns and the denomination's Council of Bishops. A study guide has been developed to explore the historical roots of racism in the division of the church and to prepare United Methodists for acts of repentance.

Delegates Refer Connectional Process Team Report to Standing Legislative Committee for Action

Reviewing the results of four years of work by the Connectional Process Team (CPT), General Conference delegates Friday referred the entire report to the standing legislative committee on General and Judicial Administration.

The action was the first discussion of CPT by the 992 delegates in a plenary session after extensive review in small groups. A tabulation of both strengths and weaknesses was reported to delegates Thursday night.

Friday the Rev. Minerva G. Carcano, Rio Grande Conference delegate and CPT member, asked the conference to create a temporary Covenant Council that would initiate gradual change toward a “transformational direction” for the denomination. The entire report proposes sweeping changes in both national and international activities and organizational structure.

On behalf of the CPT, Carcano proposed that the temporary covenant council would replace the existing General Council on Ministries and would be accountable to the 2004 General Conference. The temporary body would continue the work done by the CPT and report regularly to annual conferences and the Council of Bishops.

After extensive debate and parliamentary motions, more than 63 percent of the delegates voted to refer the entire report to the legislative committee. That panel will review further the CPT report and proposals and bring recommendations back to the entire General Conference before adjournment May 12.

In another action Friday, the conference voted to call for the removal of the Confederate battle flag from the South Carolina capitol building. The South Carolina Conference, Columbia Area Bishop J. Lawrence McCleskey, and other church officials and bodies in the state have supported removal of the flag.

Also during the Friday session, the gavel symbolizing the presidency of the United Methodist Council of Bishops passed from Louisville Area Bishop Robert C. Morgan to Dallas Area Bishop William B. Oden. Seattle Area Bishop Elias G. Galvan has been named president-elect to take office a year from now.

In a news conference Friday afternoon, Bishop Oden said the major issue before United Methodism is the global nature of the church. “We have basically been a U.S. church with global outposts . . . (and) are having to recreate our structure” to make the global nature visible.

Other major issues cited by Bishop Oden were racism, world poverty, and theological education.

In the spirit of the Service of Repentance Thursday night, the conference adopted by a near-unanimous vote a resolution extending greetings to Pope John Paul II and recognizing “the profound statements of sorrow and regret that you have made in this year of Jubilee regarding certain past practices of the Roman Catholic Church, Catholics and other Christians.

“We accept your apology for the use of force in the search for truth practiced against our Protestant forebears in the Christian faith. In the instances of misunderstandings, insensitivities and harm brought about by The United Methodist Church and its predecessors in the faith to the Roman Catholic Church and Catholics, we in turn ask forgiveness for our deeds of commission and omission.

“We rejoice in the growth of mutual understanding of each other that has developed in the past decades between the Roman Catholic and United Methodist churches and among Roman Catholics and United Methodists. We look forward to increased understanding that is brought about by prayer, dialogue and reflection.”

United Methodists also rejoiced in the development of Africa University in Mutare, Zimbabwe. A report on growth in both student body and teaching staff was underscored with music by choirs from Africa University and United Methodist-related Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.

In a sermon at the morning worship hour, Arkansas Area Bishop Janice Riggle Huie said the church has done “far too much hanging on and surviving in the last part of the 20th century. Too long we’ve tried to love God and love our

Cookies for All

During the ten days of General Conference, approximately 250,000 cookies will be served to delegates, conference staff, press and others lucky enough to be within arm’s reach. The plastic bags of cookies include Scripture verses.

Not all are eaten every day. The surplus is sent to hunger programs that serve more than 5,000 persons each month.

Book of Discipline* Tells the Story of General Conference

A burgundy-covered book sits on the shelves of United Methodists around the world. Whether the text is printed in English, Korean, Spanish, or another language, the volume tells the story of the 2000 General Conference and General Conferences before it.

Every four years, The Book of Discipline is updated and reprinted to reflect the will of the church's official voice, the General Conference. Each petition and resolution approved, each jot and tittle changed, is closely tracked by the Committee on Correlation and Editorial Revision to ensure the integrity of the Discipline.

Judy Smith, who serves as one of the staff persons for the committee, says committee members look for conflicts in legislation and make sure all changes are recorded correctly. Committee members track legislative action during plenary sessions and then review and approve disciplinary paragraphs processed through the Petition Entry and Tracking System (PETS).

"This committee signs off on the Discipline," Smith says. "The objective is to finish as much of the editorial work as possible while we're here [at the General Conference]."

What isn't completed by noon Saturday, May 13, will be taken back to the publishing house in Nashville. UMPH editors will use the DCA proceedings and PETS to finish the preliminary Discipline manuscript, which will be reviewed by committee members. "In July the committee members come to the publishing house for three or four days to go through everything," Smith says.

Once changes are recorded, copies of the manuscript are sent to the general agencies for review. The Committee on Correlation reviews agency notes before the final copy is submitted to the publishing house's production department. The Discipline is then typeset, printed, and bound for delivery to United Methodists.

Non-English editions of the Discipline are translated and printed following the finalization of the English-language version. Approximately 112,000 English, 800 Korean, and 800 Spanish copies are printed.

Church Must 'Get Out in Front,' Denver Pastor Tells AMAR Gathering

Amar, Spanish for "to love," has become the acronym AMAR for the coalition of "United Methodist-related groups working to assist The United Methodist Church to become welcoming—in policy and practice—of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender persons and their families." AMAR consists of:

- Affirmation: United Methodists for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgendered Concerns;
- Methodist Federation for Social Action; and
- Reconciling Congregation Program.

Addressing oppression related to sexual orientation, AMAR was recently joined in its efforts by members of United Methodists of Color for a Fully Inclusive Church. At a press luncheon May 3, speakers addressed the coalition's concerns and apprised reporters of upcoming events. The Rev. Gilbert H. Caldwell, a convener of United Methodists of Color for a Fully Inclusive Church and pastor of Park Hill UMC, Denver, spoke passionately from his experience working for human rights for African-Americans. He quoted Martin Luther King Jr., who asked: "Why is the church a taillight rather than a headlight?" He expressed hope that the church will respond to the issue of inclusiveness so that we do not have to return some day in the future to apologize for our actions.

All in the Family

The delegate who received a hug from a bishop during the opening worship procession was lay delegate Mary Brooke Casad. The bishop was her father, Bishop Benjamin R. Oliphint. Casad chairs the North Texas delegation, a position Bishop Oliphint occupied 20 years ago at the 1980 General Conference.

The Rev. Don W. Underwood, North Texas clergy delegate, continues a family tradition. The Underwoods have had a family member serving as a delegate in every decade since the 1930s. Don's grandfather was a delegate to the Uniting Conference of 1939, and his father served as a delegate to the Uniting Conference of 1968.

Philip H. Carver and the Rev. Rebecca C. Carver—both Iowa Conference delegates—are spouses. Their families have attended General Conference since 1968: the Rev. Don Carver, 1968-92 delegate and 2000 observer; the Rev. Art Campney, 1976-84 delegate; Jo Campney, 1988; Phil Carver, 1984-92 and 2000 delegate, and Rebecca Carver, 1996-2000 delegate. Phil and Rebecca began dating at the 1984 General Conference, and their son Joel was born during the 1992 General Conference.

The Rev. Lee B. Sheaffer, Virginia Conference delegate, and Ruth A. Daugherty, Eastern Pennsylvania Conference delegate, are siblings.

Walk on Water in Your Free Time

If you have some free time at lunch or on the weekend, you may want to venture near the lake and step out on the water. The Steamship William G. Mather is located next to the Rock-and-Roll Hall of Fame and, after months of being closed, opens this weekend. The 1925 Great Lakes Freighter is a floating museum. Visitors can explore historic cargo holds, the four-story engine room, elegant dining rooms, the galley, and the brass and oak pilot house. The 618-foot steamer includes exhibits and videos that share the evolution of the shipping industry. Wear comfortable, flat, rubber-soled shoes and enjoy some time on the lake.

Correction

In the Independent Commissions Legislative Committee report printed in the May 5 DCA on p. 1804, the tenth bullet item should read: "Calling the general church, annual conferences, districts, local churches and individuals to oppose the increase in hate crimes in church and society."

The Short family has had a representative at General Conference since 1934! Pictured here at General Conference 2000 are Louise Short, widow of Bishop Roy Short; her grandson the Rev. Phillip Short, Lake Wales, Fla.; and her son the Rev. Riley Short, Lakeland, Fla. Mrs. Short lives in Nashville, Tenn.

Tons of Potatoes, Bishops to Help Cleveland's Hungry

Saturday morning United Methodist bishops and others will help unload 45,000 pounds of potatoes donated by a Maine farmer to the Potato Project as part of the Bishops' Initiative on Children and Poverty.

The nationwide produce salvage program began in 1983 as a way to provide direct relief to the hungry by transporting unmarketable, yet perfectly good produce to hunger relief agencies.

A tractor-trailer filled with more than 22 tons of potatoes will be unloaded at Cleveland's municipal parking lot, section D beginning at 11 a.m. Everyone is invited to help in the project.

The Society of St. Andrew, a United Methodist-related ministry, will transport and package the spuds. Cleveland's Second Harvest food bank will distribute the potatoes.

The municipal parking lot is within walking distance of the Convention Center. To get to section D, exit the Convention Center onto Lakeside Ave. Walk east (right) to East 9th St. Then turn north (left) onto East 9th St.

Cross over the railroad tracks, but turn right before crossing Memorial Shoreway. Enter the walkway, just past the parking garage on the right that turns down Memorial Shoreway, and follow it to the east (right) to the parking lots. Lot D is the fourth section.

Africa University Report Received on 99.2 Vote

Bishop Roger W. Ireson, General Secretary of the Board of Higher Education and Ministry, and presenters of the United Methodist-related Africa University in Zimbabwe, had one of the most spirited reports to come before the 2000 General Conference. Enthusiastic reports and testimonials from young alumni were punctuated with stirring music from the Chamber Choir of Africa University, under the direction of Dr. Patrick Matsikenyiri. Ireson reported that the university now has 871 students from 18 African countries with faculty coming from 12 countries. "The bringing together of the many cultures is now a reality, he said.

Dr. James Salley, associate vice chancellor for advancement of the university and a delegate to General Conference from South Carolina, thanked the delegates and visitors and Dr. Ireson, his board, and United Methodist churches everywhere for the financial and on-site support.

Bishop Emilio de Carvalho, the university's chancellor and president from Angola, spoke of the special place the university has in educating people from at least nine African countries, plus America, in a culturally and academically enriching setting. "We are accomplishing our goals," he said.

Thanks to the support of Bishop Woodie White and others, the school recently dedicated two dormitories made possible with contributions from the North Indiana Conference. Two more dormitories are in the planning stage thanks to the contributions from the South Indiana Conference.

The University is now developing a Health Sciences major that promises to take expertly trained health professionals into every African country within the next few years. Plans also call for expansion of the University's Distance Education Learning program, taking higher education to other countries. Dr. Salley said they plan to be in Liberia and the Congo.

Two graduates, Sophia Chiremba and Richard Footsin of Cameroon, doing post graduate work at leading American universities, spoke of the unique opportunities Africa University offered them for higher education in the multi-cultural setting.

A video, "Transforming Lives – Transforming Africa" demonstrated the advances the university has made and pointed toward its contributions to the continent that contains a fifth of the world's population.

An appeal was made in the report for funding to be increased to $20 million per quadrennium or $5 million per year, instead of the current support of $2.5 million per year level since 1989.

The Africa University report was received on a 99.2% favorable vote.

DECISION NO. 885

IN RE: Request from the General Conference Committee on Correlation and Revision for a Declaratory Decision Relating to Petitions Before the General Conference Which Use the Language “Professing Membership.”

DIGEST

The phrase “professing member” is not inherently unconstitutional. If petitions using the phrase “professing member” can be amended to include a clear definition of the phrase which does not refer to paragraphs or petitions already declared unconstitutional or out of order, such petitions would be constitutional and in order for consideration by the General Conference.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Following the release of Decision 884 on May 4, 2000, the General Conference Committee on Correlation and Revision asked the following question of the Judicial Council:

In response to Judicial Council decision 884, the Committee on Correlation and Editorial Revision has one further urgent question for clarification. We understand that the language of “baptized member” from the 1996 Discipline is unconstitutional. Given decisions 811 and 884, may the language of “professing membership” be used in lieu of the language of “full membership” if the definition of this term does not suffer from the constitutional infirmity of offering membership without taking vows?

As the language of “professing member” appears in several petitions in various committees, the matter is quite urgent to the work of the Conference, we appreciate your earliest possible consideration.

Jurisdiction

The Judicial Council has jurisdiction under Par. 2616 of the 1996 Discipline.

Analysis and Rationale

This question arises because Decisions 811 and 884 state that Par. 4 of the Constitution requires “every individual personally to take the appropriate vows to become a member of a local church.” Decision 884 states: “[a]ll legislation based on the definitions of ‘baptized members’ and ‘professing members’ as set forth in the 1996 Discipline is unconstitutional.” The phrase “professing member” is not inherently unconstitutional. The problem arises when the definition of that term is taken from petitions which have been declared out of order or paragraphs of the 1996 Discipline which have been declared unconstitutional. If petitions using the phrase “professing member” can be amended to include a clear definition of the phrase which does not refer to paragraphs or petitions already declared unconstitutional or out of order, they would be constitutional and in order for consideration by the General Conference. Such a definition must state that a “professing member” is an individual who personally has taken the vows of membership as required by Par. 4 of the Constitution.

Decision

The phrase “professing member” is not inherently unconstitutional. If petitions using the phrase “professing member” can be amended to include a clear definition of the phrase which does not refer to paragraphs or petitions already declared unconstitutional or out of order, such petitions would be constitutional and in order for consideration by the General Conference.

Episcopal Leader Says Homosexuality Issue Will Bring Church Closer Together

(UMNS)—The new president of the United Methodist Council of Bishops predicts the church “will be drawn closer together” as General Conference addresses the issue of homosexuality.

“I am not a voting delegate, and I can't predict what will happen to every piece of legislation,” said William Oden, bishop of the Dallas Area. “But I believe we will be closer together after this conference as a result of our discussions (on homosexuality).”

Oden's remarks came during a press conference held shortly after he took the helm as president of the Council of Bishops. The president serves a one-year term. President-elect Elias Galvan, bishop of the Seattle Area, will succeed Oden next year.

Besides the issue of homosexuality, Oden commented on several other key issues facing delegates including: the church's global nature; the act of repentance for racism service; global poverty; theological education around the world; and a proposed television campaign to heighten public awareness of the church and its worldwide mission.

Oden did not endorse or criticize any legislative proposals, but challenged delegates to help the denomination embrace its global nature, particularly in light of rapid church growth outside the United States.

No longer is the denomination “an American church with mission outposts in other countries,” Oden said. “We're waking up to the fact that if we are truly to call ourselves a global church, we must invite our churches in Europe, Africa and Asia to take their rightful place as partners and leaders in ministry.”

Oden also challenged local churches and members to initiate dialogue and acts of repentance in their own congregations and communities, saying the church must find ways to move from ritual to response.

Independent Commissions—(5/5/00)

The committee considered suspending its work after learning some delegates do not have the Daily Christian Advocate in their native language. Anger increased when the committee learned the delegates did not receive the materials in English until they arrived in Cleveland earlier this week.

In speech that moved from anger to sadness, Mujinga Kainda, a delegate from South Congo, told the committee of first being reassigned to another committee where translators were present and then being told to leave that group and return to her original assignment.

Kainda said she left the 1996 General Conference in Denver, Colo., confident that materials would be available to her in either French or Swahili.

"If you don't want us," she said, "tell us to go home."

Ricky James, Mississippi, moved that the committee suspend its work until the problem is resolved. If the General Conference is to act as the Body of Christ, he said, "there is no petition we have to deal with that is more important than resolving this issue."

The committee decided to continue meeting using the available translators. Committee leaders also asked the DCA and Commission on General Conference to provide the delegates materials in their own language "as soon as possible."

The Committee also intends to send a strongly worded statement to the General Conference to assure the situation does not occur again.
